

Fear

Evans Blue

Guilt reflects and then leaves the rest to me
It started with a flash of light
A fist's grip was loosened just a bit
There's a constant slip out of the positive
And you waste more perfect time than you have to give All the fear and all the cares of the world
Never forced themselves into my arms
It was your fear that held me
And fear that got me to move
Straight from your heart into their sights The grace and hope, I'm sure are on the way
It ended with a twist of fate
And now the hearts are breaking just a bit
And the consequence was negative
So you killed more precious lives than you had let live All the fear and all the cares of the world
Never forced themselves into my arms
It was your fear that held me
And fear that got me to move
Straight from your heart into their sights For shame on you,
Who cares about me anyway?
I don't. Mind you,
It'd mean so much if you'd just save me, save me All the fear and all the cares of the world
Never forced themselves into my arms
It was your fear that held me
And fear that got me to move
Straight from your heart into their sights
