

I Wish I Were You

Aaron Sprinkle

In these recent years I have noticed that your face has slightly changed

 In this season of the bitter pill that pulled your heart away

 In the daylight when it hits you straight on see the lines in your face have begunWhen I tell you that you're beautiful like a second hand that stopped

 You remind me of a waterfall that turned the earth to mud

 In this season of the bitter pill that pulled your heart away

 Feel it coming in againAll that you've known up till now you could trade for this thought I'm singing about

 That now and again I'll play the fool

but I love you so much I wish I were youAll that you've known up till now

 You could trade for this thought i'm singing about

 That now and again I'll play the fool

 But I love you so much I wish I were you
