

Nameless Girl

The Exponents

Dressed in black I think she knew
What was coming and what to do

The wind blew across the cliffs
She watched the beacon light the mist was
She a dreamer or a realist, the nameless girl

In her room one candle died
She lit one more to show she tried

If patience is a virtue then it makes no sense for
All the anguish and the loneliness she
Closed the door to the sea

Made a virtue of necessity

The waves crashed along the beach
She swam away beyond her reach where
No one hears her final speech

The Nameless Girl, oh The Nameless Girl, oh

Across the coast some church bells ring
For those lost souls that cry or sing
Sometimes it happens in the rain

I hear her call his name
I hear her call his name
I hear her call his name
I hear her call his name

The wind blew across the cliffs
I watched the beacon light the mist but
No one sees that silent kiss

The Nameless Girl, oh The Nameless Girl, oh
The Nameless Girl, oh The Nameless Girl

Lyrics submitted by LyricNZ.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnlyrics.com/>