

Twilight Red

Sahara Smith

Twilight red, a candle flame, burning ghosts into a darkened sky.

I thought you said I was to blame. You're not the only one who's lied a little, tried to get by a little easier. Quiet dark, a glowing ember, casting shadow into broken light.

In your heart, please remember me. You're not the only one who's lied a little, tried to get by a little easier. You're not the only little girl, nothing in the world to make it easier. Silver rain, wind in willow trees whisper voices in an empty night.

I hear your name rolling over me. You're not the only one who's lied a little, only one who's cried a little, only one who's died a little, tried to get by a little easier.

You're not the only little girl, nothing in the world to make it easier.

And I still wish that you were mine, but I believe that time will make it easier.
