Break Your Fall

Cris Jacobs

Dangerous, this tumble we take to risk a heartbreak, but place our faith up for rewardTurn out the lights, I don't wanna see you hurting
I just wanna feel the burdens, of your tender legs giving outHigh wires, we're standing, wild fires, and crash landings
I know you feel the fear in your heart jump down from wherever you are and I'll break your fallFace it, we are always bound to feel lonely put a thousand mirrors on me, and face it again and again It's a thirst, and an ache, and poisonous heart breaking sometimes, I'll admit what's worse is the way that we hold like grenades on to itHigh wires, we're standing, wild fires, and crash landings
I know you feel the fear in your heart
jump down from wherever you are and I'll break your fall I won't let you go, just come down and I will catch you High wires, you're toeing, just trying, to let go of it
I know you feel the fear in your heart
I know you lose your way in the dark just come down from wherever you are, and I'll break your fallYour best defense is to signal your last surrender,
I will catch you, I will break your fall
