Halloween

Ryan Adams

Heart stops beating, all the words worth repeating
She is dancing but not singing
Is it maybe that she doesn't know the words?
She's dressed up but don't worry she's got friendsSnowflake eating, she is mildly self defeating
And the secrets that she's keeping
They are really only dangerous to her
Ships ain't sinkingWe are here to help you sing your songs
We are here to help you sing your songs
Because tomorrow comes and no one callsShe stops grinning when the room it starts spinning
She is losing all her winnings
She's angry but it's just the alcohol
She's all fucked right up, it's okay man she's got friends'Cause we are here to help her sing her songs
We are here to help her sing her songs
Because tomorrow's gonna come
Tomorrow's gonna come and no one's gonna callThis isn't Christmas, this is Chinatown and those are pretty lights
Just use some more and put 'em on your make-up dolls
A painting on the underneath that never smiles on the scene
Is just like Christmas if it was HalloweenSomeone taught her it's okay to be a martyr
Like an educated angel, be a rat
You know in all the things you love
Well okayPriceless pictures, she's collected iceless fixtures
That is freezing from the people
She's chosen out to help her through it all
WhateverWe are here to help you sing your songs
We are here to help you sing your songs
We are here to help you sing your songs
Because tomorrow's gonna come
Tomorrow's gonna come, no one's gonna call

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/