

For All

Sanzu

Watch us mine the earth for all our profits and coat this world in oxidized mud.
Disrespect soaking the palace below,
burning dry the planets blood.
We displace all the people of the land to farm
Our precious cuts, refined and cold.
Our hands deal death out.
To the helpless, I send my true prayer to you.
Now raise your wounds and wear them high.
We'll all go down, lose the sun.
Let it set in our eyes for the guilt.
Let's all rejoice in the seeds of our wealth.
We leach the seas of their purity.
Drowning all those who contest our unfailing will.
In the blistering core of the globe; entities grieving in the waste of their children.
Machine-like demons sink their teeth into billions of pounds of flesh.
Waiting to fill the belly of man.
Salt and stains upon the face of humanity bare truth to those we have cursed with our lust for consuming.
Carbon degenerate sparkles from the teeth of the sharks who eclipse the sun.
Depriving us of the primordial.
Yellow rivers of sulfur and rot, beg for a single drop.
How does it taste on your savage tongue.
how does it taste? The planets blood?
Evaporate the sand. Our tears of Oxygen.
We've built a new world from oil.
For all.
