Calliope!

The Veils

I woke this morning deep in the earth
Laying bare with the granite and the moths
Up, I clambered and I was met by the sun
It was then I saw you there, down on the street

My love
You've come such a long way
With no one to comfort you
Or to tell you you're needed

You and I come from the same place
But if I were to come for you
What's there left to believe in?

So I signaled up to the high and crumbling moon
We've made it then, my love
Closed both my eyes and crawled under the sink
And as I dreamt, I swear, I felt you in my arms again

You've come such a long way
With no one to comfort you
Or to tell you you're needed

You and I come from the same place
But if I were to come for you
What's there left to believe in?

You're all I have left to believe in
