

It Should Have Been Me

Andreas Johnson

Lay down by my side
The truth won't hurt me now
And even in this last goodbye
There's beauty we can't deny Now maybe, maybe, maybe it's a crime, dear
Oh, maybe, maybe, maybe I don't wanna see
Why you give yourself away When it should have been me
It should have been my love
It should have been me
It should have been my kind of love Escape with me tonight
This moment is all there is
When the morning comes, we're cast aside
Now there's farewell in every kiss Oh, you stumble through emotions
With great and deep concern
You cross my line of defense
You know how weakness makes me yearn Then you throw my love away
Afraid of what you see
Hell, you ought to know by now It should have been me
It should have been my love
It should have been me
It should have been my kind of love When you walk beside him
Down the aisle in your brilliant wedding dress
When the ring is on your finger
And he wants you to get undressed Will you fall into his arms?
Will you set his spirit free?
Will he ever get to know
It should have been me? Now maybe, maybe, maybe I'm alone here
Oh, maybe, maybe, maybe I don't wanna see
Why you give yourself away When it should have been me
It should have been my love
It should have been me
It should have been my kind of love It should have been me
It should have been my love
It should have been me
It should have been my kind of love
