Just Like Fire

Helldorado

It was on a hot day that Johnny lost his mind
He drove his pickup to his shack and soon hit the moonshine
He laughed and he cheered until the hour got late
And when the moon came up he pulled out his thirty eightChorus:
He danced just like fire
He fell down just like rain
But all flames must expire
While the ashes still remainNobody knows exactly what went wrong
The night that Johnny took a blade and cut of his tongue
And then gave to the dogs just to watch them fight
Not a word he would speak since that bleak nightChorus:
He danced just like fire
He fell down just like rain
But all flames must expire
While the ashes still remainWell, he sat up all night reading his bible
And the next morning 'drove a nail through his eyeball
Then he went outside and started digging a hole
Deep down in the soil, looking for his lost soulChorus:
He danced just like fire
He fell down just like rain
But all flames must expire
While the ashes still remain
