

Where Your Father's Been

Colony House

You wake up with your eyes shut
And you lift up from the cries you
Never known how much they mean
Every prophecy they bring
It's like your heart already knows
This is where your father's been
And where you're gonna goBreathe deep every new day
Let the sun rise, let the light stay
For the rain will never stop
If you're chasing every drop
No you don't have to go alone
This is where your father's been
And where you're gonna goDream boy, go and wander
Fill your heart with foreign thunder
Passion leads a man to love
But that alone is not enough
You've gotta lay your body low
Cause if you love something enough
You learn to let it go
Oh, oh
You've gotta lay your body low
Yes if you love something enough
You learn to let it goAnd when you're afraid
That this road has led you away
Let love find you
Let love find you, oh
Let love guide you
And remind your soul to listen
Are you listening to you?
Oh, ohAnd then the pain is true
And your strength is falling through
Whatever shadow that you hold
This is where your father's been
And where you're gonna goOh, I wish I could take it away
Every moment that your heart will break
Just don't forget the truth you know
Remember who your father is
And where you're gonna goOn a new day
Every step that you take

Every sunrise
Every dream that you make
Every new day
Every heartbreak
Every sunrise and sunset
In this day, in this day
This is where your father's been
And boy, I'm gonna goAnd now you're looking for a light to guide you
A fire's burning buried deep inside you
And when you're searching for a voice to find you
Be still and listen to the song that binds you
