Night Air

Jamie Woon

Night air has the strangest flavor Space to breathe it, time to savor All that night air has to lend me Till the morning makes me angryIn the night air, the night air In the night air, in the night airI've acquired a kind of madness Daylight fills my heart with sadness And only silent skies can sooth me Feel that night air flowing through meIn the night air, the night air In the night air, in the night airI don't need those car crash colors I control the skies above us Close my eyes to make the night fall Comfort of a world revolving I can hear the earth in orbitIn the night air, in the night air In the night air, in the night airI've acquired a taste for silence Darkness fills my heart with calmness And each thought like a thief is driven To steal the night air from the heavensIn the night air In the night air In the night air
