

Why Did You Marry

Nataly Dawn

Why did you marry?
Oh why did you marry?
You could have been an actress
You could have been a doctor
You could have been somebody people wish they knew Why did you marry?
Oh why did you marry?
Did no one ever tell you
To fly to the moon
To not get tied down too soon
To shop around Oh all the places you'd go
All the folks you'd meet
They'd say, Honey, you've still got it!
But no, that was twenty-some-odd years ago Today you're just getting by You're just getting by Why did you marry?
Oh why did you marry?
Did somebody convince you
Through sermons and psalms
That you could be happy
Just tagging along Oh all the places you'd go
All the folks you'd meet
They'd say, Honey, thank god you didn't end up like all of the other girls on your street
They're just getting by They're just getting by But I think that I know
Yes I know why you married
It's just like in the movies
The novels and plays
Where no one ever says,
Thanks Cary Grant, but I think
I'll just get my own place Oh all the places you'd go
All the folks you'd meet
They'd say, Honey, you've still got it
and guess what, we've all got it too
So pull up a seat
We're just getting by
We're just getting by
