Pitiful

Big Maybelle

As I recall with my stomach turning
I was hiding away from myself, away from you
Like nothing, though something was terribly wrong
And I admit that I was only waiting for the right time
Night time, the right moment for you to look away
Though you never did, I pretended for a while
So I could walk where I don't belongAnd I remember every word you said
Come back in time, come back
And I remember I would soon be dead
Now so pitiful, so pitifulBut I know, as I hammered those nails into your beautiful hands
Your eyes still try to search for mine, but I look away
Now your eyes are the only thing that can save me
I'm still so afraid of them piercing
You're breaking into my prison,
Just pretended for a while
My soul is dying
I won't look awayAnd I remember every word you said...I'll remember every word you said
This time I won't look away
