

Still It Takes Me by Surprise

Tony Banks

It can be strange in the world we live in
So many things are not how they appear
We sit and talk of what it doesn't matter
The meaning of the words we use hides behind the sound
Yet still it takes me by surprise
How the feeling overtakes me and fills my mind
With thoughts which even now I can't control
How simple words and gestures make the world seem right?
No matter what they say
No matter what they say
It's hard to believe once we met as strangers
Not knowing of the life that we would share
You lead me on through new ways unfamiliar
Or down a road we traveled many times before
Yet still it takes me by surprise
How the feeling overtakes me and fills my mind
With thoughts which even now I can't control
How simple words and gestures make the world seem right?
No matter what they say
No matter what they say
The years go by older yet no wiser
Our hearts and minds remain as they once were
And after all the time that we have been together
So many times we must have been this way before
Yet still it takes me by surprise
How the feeling overtakes me and fills my mind
With thoughts which even now I can't control
How simple words and gestures make the world seem right?
No matter what they say
No matter what they say
