Killamangiro

Peter Doherty

Ohh, ohh, ohh Why would you pay to see me in a cage? And why would you pay to see me in a cage? Some men call the stage Listen now I have gone you will know I was the only one that would have gladly died What was wrong in the eyes of the unwell and unwise They killed a man for his giro today Wasn't very game, I didn't mind I wasn't a money man anyway They killed a man for his giro today Why, would you pay Why, would you pay To see me in the cage Just a hole across the stage And know when the night has gone You might say I was not the only the one that would've died What was wrong in the eyes of the cruel and unwise And they killed a man for his giro today On the off chance that you're listening to the radio I thought you might like to know you broke my heart You can only start to know or hedge your bets And take a chance you never get again All my ties, time and time I keep on trying hard not to try too hard When I forgive, I won't forget To killing time, so I'm better now I don't need it anymore Anything that makes you, feel hate Can do without hate Now I believe in love Now I have gone oh yeah, I will pay For everything you've done What was wrong in the eyes of the unwell and unwise

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/

They killed a man for his giro today, ohh, ohh, ohh