

One Day

O.a.r. (of A Revolution)

There's an emptiness between us,
Been filling up for days,
It's heavy on my mind,
Fighting all the time,
But we'll never find our way.
You swore you would remember,
What a shame you had to lie,
Now this battle that you're in,
Is underneath your skin,
And the fight is in your eyes.
But one day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone to pick you up again,
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone.
You know this ain't pretend now,
I'd fix it if I could,
So pack up all your things,
Drop off all your rings,
Things have changed for good.

And you swore you would protect me,
You swore you would not lie,
Now the battle that were in,
Is in between locked doors,
And the fight is in our eyes.
But one day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone to pick you up again,
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone.
All these lonely days lead to lonely nights,
And a lonely night, I sleep.
Trapped inside what became my life,
And it's all because of me.
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone to pick you up again,
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone, anywhere now.
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone to pick you up again,
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone to pick you up again,
One day you'll fall down and there won't be anyone to pick you up again,
To pick you up again.
