

Running Man

Al Stewart

Advisory - the following lyrics contain explicit language:

Before the phone hits the receiver you're halfway to the door the voice said "get out while you can, theres just 10 minutes, nothing more"
Time for only the essentials, better gather them and run
The false name inside the passport, the gold bars and the gun.
And once again they've come out of the past and though your mind is cool, your heart's beating fast You've been through it all before each time you wish a little more than you can ask."what do you want from me?
What do you need from me?
There's no rest for the running man Why can't you let him be?"Its a long and twisting journey, from the sweeping northern plains, to the outcrops of the jungle bowed beneath the tropic rains
In the customs hall the officer takes you to one side and his eyes reveal no feeling as you hand over the bribe And once again you've bought a little time
And once again you're fading out of sight Still the fox is growing older, as he calls over your shoulder to the nightHere, come over here..beneath a sympathetic moon we'll sit and talk over old times without a fear another beer, from the cafes of the night the tumbling rhythms of guitars ring loud and clearOne by one they've nailed the others, but you always got away
What it is that keeps you just that step ahead, no one can say in one last raid the agents of the dawn break down the door of a house where you were standing maybe just an hour before and still the thread continues to unwind you take the hidden roads that only you can find and should they come upon your tracks theres just a question hanging back you left behind"what do you want from me? What do you need from me?"
