Mistake

Jaya the Cat

Well, I met her downtime at a trance party
I was crushing in a corner when she came up to me
Lit her cigarette, she sat down, we talked for a while Said she was looking for someone to waste some time with Time was all we had so we spent it like spare change
Emptied out our pockets at the bars by the fairway
Had a pretty good run before the end
Got out before it caught up, man
And as the black and whites faded into grey
They say that you can never look back
But I didn't wanna anywayYou know, that when I said I loved you
Well, I musta been drunk
Because you're no one that I'd ever love
And when I exorcize my devils you're the first one gone
No use in looking for an answer, now to what went wrong
And she said "hey, hey, you know it's alright, man, some things - they just turn out that way"fifty cent beers in at the corner store in a one room apartment on the 13th floor
Sleep all day until the night creeps in thru the open window to call us again
Responsibility got knifed in the back, dumped in an alley and left for dead
But thru all the mistakes and the beautiful lies
That we told ourselves while we were blacking out Somehow we made our way out, but sometimes I miss it still
You know you can't raise the dead, so raise your glass instead
That's just the way it isYou know, that when I said I loved you
Well, I musta been drunk
Because you're no one that I'd ever love
And when I exorcize my devils you're the first one gone
No use in looking for an answer, now to what went wrong
And she said "hey, hey, you know it's alright, man, some things - they just turn out that way"
And she said "hey, hey, cause in the end it's just a mistake that we had to make"
And she said "sometimes things just turn out that way"
Sometimes things just turn out that way

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/