You're Not Stubborn

I was wrong, I take it back
Now can we get along? Pick up the slack
You know it all could be much easier
But I'm still traveling, I'm still travelingAnd all the while, the people talk
About the unsung shit that they then stalk
And use to please the crowd, the swarming hordes of folk
That watch on in sunglassesSo if I'm wrong again, I apologize
You can take a guest, I'll check out my eyes
It's a common thing to be out of line
But it's getting old by the fifteenth timeTake your time, make up your mind
Though it won't change the world, you'll be more inclined
To have a point of view that makes it through
And keeps you traveling, keeps you travelingSo pick your friends, forget the rest
You can't live life being second best
The critics talk of stubbornness
But you're just passionate, you're just passionateSo if I'm wrong again, I apologize
You can take a guest, I'll check out my eyes
It's a common thing to be out of line
But it's getting old by the fifteenth timeSo if I'm wrong again, I apologize
You can take a guest, I'll check out my eyes
It's a common thing to be out of line
But it's getting old by the fifteenth timeSo if I'm wrong again, I apologize
You can take a guest, I'll check out my eyes
It's a common thing to be out of line
But it's getting old by the fifteenth timeSo if I'm wrong again, I apologize
You can take a guest, I'll check out my eyes
It's a common thing to be out of line
But it's getting old by the fifteenth time
