Soul Catcher

The The

Mirror, mirror on the wall
You've watched me grow since I was small
So what will I regret the most
The things I do or the things I don't?
The deeper you peer into my soulYou'll find that I already know
But I can't say it because I can barely face it
My life is halfway through and I still haven't done
What I'm here to doEven though the chances flowed
I sat and watched the hours fold
In upon themselves
To stop their hands revealingWhat I can't say, what I can barely face
My life is halfway through and I still haven't done
What I'm here to do, my mummy said
What you give is what you get
And the only thing worth having is happinessBut trapped inside my bones
Fear, desire
And hope are on fire
And will expand like smokeAnd fall down like rain
Again, again, again

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/