All That Remains

One moment never told that I have seen nobility
My life's been molded
By that which was demonstrated for me
I'll not deny the truthOf right and wrong set forth for me
If I am half of this my simple pride will be released
Never believed, deceived by the foolish
The weak embody liesHerein lies the heart of this truth
I know now what it's worth
A second chance at this
Or reason to justify this giftA simple talk or two
Would let me feel more at ease
Six feet an earthen home in silence
The circle incomplete
