It's Our Job

Sondre Lerche

I was floating on a stream Words came easy as they seemed And as conversations go I let this one go off enough Tonight I'll just sit here on my backWhen you're applying your fine mind Darker corners come to shine The quality control I run, the filters that I use What I've forgotten is now forgotten What I've forgotten is now forgottenBut I think you're in my soulAnd it warms me to know That you'll still be in charge Of the heart's content It's our job, it's our job to breatheYes, it warms me to know That I'll still be in charge Of your heart's content It's our job, it's our job to breatheIt's our job, our job to breathe It's our job, our job to breathe
