Transience

Steven Wilson

TransienceCut throught the country, speed throught the dark
A child in a train, tristessa departs
It's only the startFiligree circles round her young wrist Her mother is frowning at something she misses
She fixes her hairAt the failing of the day she heard her father always say. "Remember, it's only the start"When she drifted off to sleep she had the whole world at her feet Because it's only the startBefore they fell away it seemmed to matter all the same
But it was only the start
It's only the start
