

The Heartache

Warren Zevon

Shadows falling in the noonday sun
Blue feeling to the maximum
Look what happens when you love someone
And they don't love youThe heartache, the risk you run
The chance you take when you love someone
And the sorrow for the lonely one
When the heartache comesNever thought I'd be alone like this
Guess I should have been a realist
That's the trouble with relationships
They end too soonAnd the heartache, the risk you run
The chance you take when you love someone
And the sorrow for the lonely one
When the heartache comesAnd the darkness falls
And the rain comes down in the midst of spring
There's a sadness in the heart of thingsAnd the heartache, the risk you run
The chance you take when you love someone
And the sorrow for the lonely one
When the heartache comesShadows falling in the noonday sun
Blue feeling to the maximum
