

The Disconnect

Tossing Copper

All I've ever heard is, listen to your heart.
Do whatever feels right, in the moment.
But what would happen if I, waited for a day?
My heart would tell me something different, and everything would change. But oh I can not ever, trust the way I feel.
Today the waves of sorrow rage, but tomorrow they'll be still.
But oh my heart is fickle, and quick to forget.
Tell me take it at it's word, but I don't buy it. And ohh oh oh my soul, I've listened and I have obeyed.
And ohh oh oh my soul, I fear I have been led astray. I'm slow to trust what my heart may tell, my head what is real.
Because my mind would change, every other day, if my heart led the way.
And I... I wanna hear, something new.
And I... I wanna know, something true. I've been bruised and battered, and thrown all around.
Upon the waves of my emotions, so many times I've drowned.
But oh my eyes have tricked me, with all they ever see.
Cause the picture painted in my heart, a fantasy. And ohh oh oh my soul, I know I have been led astray.
And ohh oh oh my soul, surely there's some other way. I'm slow to trust what my heart may tell, my head what is real.
Because my mind would change, every other day, if my heart led the way.
And I... I wanna hear, something new.
And I... I wanna know, something true. And I'm slow to trust, what my heart may tell, my head what is real.
Because my mind would change, every other day, if my heart led the way.
And I... I wanna hear, something new.
And I... I wanna know, something true.
