

Indigo Sky

Deacon Blue

We went as we know how
As far as the wind and the sky would allow
Waking from sleep
Alive to the noise we came After the turn of the year
With only the sky as a silver seer
Of anything restively turning
And slowly beginning Now even the weatherman's smiling
He never could see it this good
Why are we so afraid?
That under the indigo sky
We'll sing, we'll drink and we'll cry After the falling apart
After the noise and the guilt and the hurt
We woke from sleep
And saw that it wasn't a dream Was it a trick of the light?
That there in the spirit damned demon night
We lit a fire
And only crowded around it Now even the weatherman's smiling
He never could see it this good
Why are we sore afraid?
That under the indigo sky
We lay down and we died Under the indigo sky
We lay down and we died
