

A Pathetic Apology

Cassie Hatcher

I've brought you here to make amends for the bruises on your face. You left me lying for dead. Still no one can take your place. I gave you So much of my life. But you still turned away. I hope that you will realize mistakes were made. One day.

You were right all along. I'm wrong.

You were right all along. I'm gone.

Before I hit the floor, knocking down your door. You've got something there, that I can't ignore. There's always lies in truth. Something you never knew. All we could have had. All the things that I could have gave to you.

This whole life's been a rejection, no one ever stays.

I can't keep anything I need, it always drifts away.

I brought you here to make amends. And to tell you the truth because there's nothing left to lose now that I've lost you.

Where right all along I'm wrong. You where right all along I'm gone.

CHORUS

Before I hit the floor.

Before I hit the floor knocking down your door you've got something there, that I can't ignore. BEFORE I HIT THE FLOOR knocking down your door you've got something there. That I can't ignore.

There's always LIES in truth. Something you never knew. All we could have had. All the things that I would have gave, before I hit the floor

Knocking down your door you've got something there that I cant ignore. Theres always lies in truth, Something you never knew. All we could have had. All the things that I could have gave to you.
