

A Kind of Blue

Tristan Mackay

There is a kind of blue
That wakes you in the night
That shakes you from your sleep
And steals the dreams you keep
When no one's by your side.

It's the same thing too
That leads me back to you
In my head I know you're gone
In my heart you linger on Leaving me confused.

Oh my love, is it true?
There is nothing that I can do?
Oh my love, could it be?
There is no way I'll ever be free
From this kind of blue

There is a shiver through
My body laced with shame
The coldest kind of chill
Where once there was the thrill
Of calling out your name

Oh my love, is it true?
There is nothing that I can do?
Oh my love, could it be?
There is no way I'll ever be free
From this kind of blue
The curtain falls before your eyes
The world you've built is a pack of lies
Hiding in a dream
The love you lost, the chance you missed
Remembering that final kiss wakes you
And you scream

There is a kind of blue
That wakes you in the night
That shakes you from your sleep
And steals the dreams you keep

When no one's by your side.

That shakes you from your sleep
And steals the dreams you keep
When no one's by your side.
