Headlights

Tor Miller

I feel like I'm standing on a mountain
Where everyone can see me
In the worst way
All of these eyes on me expecting
But I can't find a thing to say

Headlights casting my shadow
On the clouds behind me
The darkening all that define me
And all of that blinding confusion
How did I ever find you?

In a life of second guessing
I knew that first glance
I would let you in
And the emotion of the moment
I gave myself to chance
Thought of where'd we go, not of what I didn't Headlights, I'm weak and I'm hollow
With the weight of my own head
Too heavy on my bones
Headlight, I'm eager to follow
So many things unsaid
And so much still unknown

Headlights, clearing this shadow
On the clouds behind me
But before you divine me
Nothing else in my vision
How did I ever lose you?

I was living such a naked life
Then I thought that I had it right this time
As fast as a fool can fall
I'm trapped back in these same four walls
I was living such a lonely life
Then I thought that it all come right this time
As fast as a fool can fall
Trapped back in these same four walls

Headlights casting my shadow
On the clouds behind me
The darkening all that define me
And all of that blinding confusion
How did I ever find you?

Headlights, clearing this shadow
On the clouds behind me
But before you divine me
Nothing else in my vision
How did I ever lose you?

I was living such a naked life
Then I thought that I had it right this time
As fast as a fool can fall
Trapped back in these same four walls
I was living such a lonely life
Then I thought that it all come right this time
As fast as a fool can fall
Trapped back in these same four walls
