

Risk

Paul Brandt

i'd rather stand on the edge of a cliff and hang my toes over a bit and then jump when they dare me even if it scares me, and i'd get hurt.
I'd rather build my wings on the way down, and do my best not to fall to the ground and then laugh at my mistakes cause there only lessons i'll learn.

I'd rather burn with desire deep in my soul and love like a fire that's outta control and laugh and dance and hope and chance and kiss.
I'd rather live my whole life with a sense of abandon,
squeeze every drop out no matter what happens and not wonder what I've missed I'd rather risk.

Well, I guess i could just play it safe and forget about love hope and faith with my eye on the shoreline keepin my boat tied and stayin home.
Oh but i'd never discover new land by keeping my feet on the sand i'd rather set sail and get carried away by the storm.

I'd rather burn with desire deep in my soul
and laugh and dance and hope and chance and kiss.
I'd rather live my whole life with a sense of abandon
i'd rather risk, i would rather risk i'd rather burn with desire deep in my soul
and love like a fire thats outta control live my whole life with the sence of abandon squeeze every drop out no matter what happens and i'd wonder what i would miss oh i just can't resist the chance to risk love and love and laugh and dance and for the chance and kiss i'd rather risk, i'd rather risk i'd rather risk,i'd rather risk
