Something

Karmacoda

What have you got to say, whose line is it anyway
What have you got to need, don't you say that it's only me
What have you got to try, thought you had it bagged hung and dried
Where have you got to go, lived your nine lives no more to know

There's a little something in my heart, there's a little something I've just got
To take it up with you
There's a little something you don't know, there's a little something I could show
If you would let me get through

What'll we do with now, say that you'll stick by me but how Somebody clue me in, I can't take the ache you inflict
Turns into overflow, running from you makes sense I know
Here into overtime, you've had your way now I want mine

There's a little something in my heart, there's a little something I've just got
To take it up with you
There's a little something you don't know, there's a little something I could show
If you would let me get through

Let me through to you

There's a little something in my heart, there's a little something I've just got
To take it up with you
There's a little something you don't know, there's a little something I could show
If you would let me get through

There's a little something in my heart, there's a little something
To take it on with you
There's a little something you don't know, there's a little something I could show
If you would let me get through
