Work Song

Caroline's Spine

it's another early morning, sun came up without a warning i never do nothing til i'm showered and clean got my pager, got my cuffs, a matching tie should be enough i never leave the house without something to eatan early riser by genetic, take the stairs cause i'm atheletic always at the office before anyone else i take my faxes to be copied, grab a donut, grab some coffee picture a diploma sitting on my shelfthe monotony is killing me and i try to deny this corporate labotomyi need a siut of armor for a meeting, know i'm gonna take a beating, understaffed, and my department's in a crunch budget has become a hassle, boss is ripping me a new asshole says he wants an answer on his desk before lunchafternoon, things don't look better, phone machine is breaking records five hundred messages from who knows where staying late 'cause i'm a beginner, call my girlfriend, cancel dinner says she thinks i'm having an office affairthe end of day, there's no solution, face traffic and pollution put a smile on my face i didn't get fired back at home to clear my head, i grab a drink, fall into bed forty more years until i get to retirethe monotony is killing me and i try to deny this corporate labotomy
