

Matrix

Kate Pierson

at a crossroads in a forest made of rope and hung with hope and you don't know which way you should turn and the tin man and the lion are lost, too the dream-life of us must trust the universe and not push search toward the line now its time for liberation don't despair, there's plenty of air and not no wind the circus net would you catch you if your plummet weren't immortal you're a raindrop drifting south toward the child's mouth you're freefalling
(freefalling) Without a landing
The matrix swallows you in let it begin
Don't doubt it, no
Watch the sand through the hourglass oh it moves so fast don't fear the fuhror fear the absence of time and loss there's a place for you in sunset limbo on a beach in space through the crashing wave feel the epic rain and the risk feel the rocket ship to base camp don't despair, there's plenty of air and not no wind
Don't doubt it, no
i'll tuck you in to the tide of terror deep breath and go under now feel the weightlessness of error cartwheel in what you have found you're freefalling

let it begin
