Long Lost to Where No Pathway Goes

Summoning

My star, I saw it high and far
At the parting of the ways
A light on the edge of the outer night
Like silver set ablaze
Where the round world plunges steeply down
But on the old roads goes
As an unseen bridge that on arches runs
To coasts that no man knowsI would not find the burning domes and sands
Where reigns the sun, nor dare the deadly snows
Nor seek in mountains dark the hidden lands
Of men long lost to whom no pathway goesBut where they bloom those flowers fair
In what air or land they grow
What words beyond the world I heard
If you would seek for knowIn a boat then, brother, far afloat
You must labour in the sea
And find yourself things out of mind:
You will learn no more of meI would not find the burning domes and sands
Where reigns the sun, nor dare the deadly snows
Nor seek in mountains dark the hidden lands
Of men long lost to whom no pathway goes
