You Can Always Come Home

Jason Castro

I don't think he deserves you
I'm gonna come right out and say it
Even though I hardly know you at all
That's what makes this so hard
Cause I remember he hurt you
Told you he didn't have the time
To see you or even answer your calls
After breaking your heart

I know we barely even started
But I fully believe you could have been the one for me
And I miss what we might have had
Honey I miss what we could have done
I wrote a sad song about it and I'm still pretty bitter
But I'm happy if your happy, he won
I still miss you in the night
And I want you to know
If he leaves you cold in the city, aching for a lover
Honey, you can always come home.

Yeah
Oh, do you ever stop to think
That he did it to you once
So he's probably gonna do it again
Oh do you defend
That he's an angel of virtue

He made a mistake and it cost him what he loved
But he knows what he's done
He's sorry for it now
Oh, he's never gonna leave you again
Well maybe your right, but I still believe

That you could have be the one for me
And I miss what we might have had
Honey, I miss what we could have done
I wrote a sad song about it and I'm still pretty bitter
But I'm happy if your happy, he won

I still miss you in the night

And I want you to know
If he leaves you cold in the city
Aching for a lover
Honey you can always come home
If he leaves you cold in the city
And you're begging for a lover
Honey, you can always come home

Lyrics powered by lyrics.tancode.com written by FIORE, STEPHEN WILLIAM
Lyrics Â© Universal Music Publishing Group

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/