

Courage, Robert

Meg & Dia

He saw a lonely girl
She saw a lonely world
It was a canvas, little careless
A florescent leaderAnd his was a dying breed
And courage came only from symphonies
A decorative smile to fade out
His Concerto in ACome on
A second chance at love
The moment's dead
Make you feel like it's never stayingMade love to a baby grand
A tempest refined inside his hands
He had one girl and one song
Bona fide white and blue lifeBut he had to give it up
His heart was raw but his fingers numb
His first words were his last words
And as he says, for signCome on
A second chance at love
The moment's slept
Make you feel like it's never stayingSee it burn
The first attempt or two
And so I remembered you
I, I need that moment backPlease don't, don't, don't tremor for death
Ivories that sliced sedatives in half
Relief in the Rhine, washed away regrets
And let him char before he caress the groundDear artist you will rise again
A last arabesque in faint fashionCome on
A second chance at love
The moment's dead
Make you feel like it's never endingSee it burn
The first attempt or two
But I remembered you
I, I need that moment back, please, don't, don't forgetHe woke, a final view of blue
Dear Cordias, wet rouge
Relieve romance to graves
Please, please don't forget
