

Rain Song

Native Deen

Steps out side, into the scorching heat
The well is dry, the children cry
And the lands they claim defeat Oh my father, is it evil that weve done
He smiles at the child with faith in his eyes
Inshallah the rains will come This I know, his mercy must be won
Just open your heart, this is the start
Inshallah the rains will come On him I swear, his will must be done
Like tears from your eyes, pearls from the sky
Inshallah the rains will come Father gathers, the people for their eyes to see
That if they combine their hearts and their minds
They will turn the deserts green Side by side, they stand in the burning heat
They pray to the one that brought them the sun
To make the heavens weep This I know, his mercy must be won
Just open your heart, this is the start
Inshallah the rains will come On him I swear, his will must be done
Like tears from your eyes, pearls from the sky
Inshallah the rains will come Like tears from your eyes, pearls from the sky
Inshallah the rains will come Will come. Shower your mercy and wash away the sun
Will come. Pour down your blessings until the drought is gone
Will come. Soak up our tears and let the rivers run
Will come. Please answer your servants, Allah almighty one This I know, his mercy must be won
Just open your heart, this is the start
Thank God that the rains have come On him I swear, his will has been done
He dried the tears from our eyes, pearls from sky
Thank God that the rains have come
He dried the tears from our eyes, pearls from the skys
Thank God that the rains have come
