

Between Hell and a Heartbeat

Hatebreed

Deformed living hemorrhage knotted into flesh
Betrayal lives within hosts
Anchored in bones, surviving on secrets told All screams are my whispers
In the realm of the barely living
Unraveled in the arms that carried
If it's still worth loving it's still worth letting go One last nail in the coffin of all your trust
Where there once was love now lives total disgust Somewhere between hell and a heartbeat
Somewhere between hell and a heartbeat Sometimes the unforeseeable is what our lives become
And now matter how strong and spirited we are
Some hold the weights of the harm done One last nail in the coffin of all your trust
Where there once was love now lives total disgust Deprived, undreamed of Somewhere between hell and a heartbeat Grey skies rain down a hail of black
Put your ear to my chest and hear nothing
This is oblivion, absence is heard with such clarity Just hope that it's all a dream
Stagnation of the all being
We cease to be somewhere between hell and a heartbeat
