

Given For the World

Sarah Hart

Saints and sinners, come.
Lay your hearts upon this hallowed ground,
As you all draw close to the love that knows...
Every cross you bear, every secret shame and silent prayer,
Hungry for the bread, willing to be fed in this sacrifice.

All are welcome here, when love is broken for the broken, emptied for the empty, given for the world. In the light in the darkness, in the singing and the silence, love surrenders all, given for the world.

Saints and sinners fall, here beneath the beauty of it all, flesh upon the wood, our sorrows understood.
Death redeeming life, by the blood our stains have been made white, O lift your heart in praise, rejoice in him who saves by this sacrifice.

Where love is broken for the broken, emptied for the empty, given for the world. In the light in the darkness, in the singing and the silence, love surrenders all, given for the world.
