Hey, Don't Stop

Cartel

It's never easy to see the sun
When you're locked up in this pretty plaster cage
So she says she'd love to feel alive again
But this loneliness necessitates her void
And I tell her don't stop trying to be the one
'Cuz one day it won't matter who you are
She's had enough of being down and it seems that everything
That she's heard
It's everything that makes her cry
And it's just about time to get this right
'Cuz I don't know if it's all about taking this drink tonight
And I've been thinking baby, that you're out of your mind
So now it's midnight and she leans against the wind
She finds it cold and comforting in this bold and daring glow
Yeah, we all know to pass the time
We pass around a few cold stares and wonder who we are
I think she's better off this way
And I tell her don't stop trying to be the one
'Cuz one day it won't matter who you are
She's had enough of being down and it seems that everything
That she's heard
It's everything that makes her cry
And it's just about time to get this right
'Cuz I don't know if it's all about taking this drink tonight
And I've been thinking baby that you're out of your mind
