Lonely Tonight

Erick Baker

My sheets still smell like your perfume
On the side of the bed where you used to lay
Left your key and a torn paper note
In blue ink, "I'm Sorry," is all you could say

But I will be alright
Yes, I will be alright
And I hope that he's with you holding you tight
But I hope that you're lonely tonight

I've tried not to think about you
But I'm scared that I might forget
As the clothes you left piled on the floor
Wait like memories I can't throw away

But I will be alright
Yes, I will be alright
And I hope that he's with you holding you tight
But I hope that you're lonely tonight

So tonight when I lay my head down
Without the true love I thought I had found
I'll be telling that I don't love you anymore
If I can

But I will be alright
Yes, I will be alright
And I hope that he's with you holding you tight
But I won't be lonely tonight
