

If He Should Ever Leave You

Tom Jones

Your captivating eyes, the clever way they smile
Stops him in his tracks
Then add your pretty face, you keep him in his place
He'd do anything you ask They've broken the mold
More precious than gold
When you're standing there
The world disappears It would be a crime to ever let you go
He should be inclined to keep you very close
No one else compares, you're a cut above the rest
He'd be such a fool if he should ever leave you Careful what you do, he's so in love with you
You might tear him apart
To watch the way you move, it's obvious that you
Were made for breaking hearts The pout of your lips
Those soft fingertips
The curve of your waist
You're perfectly made It would be a crime to ever let you go
He should be inclined to keep you very close
No one else compares, you're a cut above the rest
He'd be such a fool if he should ever leave you It would be a crime to ever let you go
He should be inclined to keep you very close
No one else compares, you're a cut above the rest
He'd be such a fool if he should ever It would be a crime to ever let you go
He should be inclined to keep you very close
No one else compares, you're a cut above the rest
He'd be such a fool if he should ever leave you Your captivating eyes
The subtle way you smile sets him in a spin
The subtle way you smile
