

Back to Yesterday

Dylan Jakobsen

I know she's gone,
Packed up all the things she owns,
Left without a warning or a note goodbye,
Guess I probably should have been a better guy,
Sometimes I swear,
I say things that don't get us anywhere,
Well we fight and I pray that we'll make it up,
But I know this time it aint enough so
I turned my cell phone off,
Cause I can't live this way,
Waiting on your call,
Hoping something's changed,
Man it kills me to know that there aint us anymore
But the door is always open,
And my hearts been locked and chained,
And every now and then when I feel like talking,
I go back now my world is stopping,
On things that I can't handle,
Wish there was something I could say,
To bring us back to when we had it all,
Yeah back to yesterdayThere aint no worries on our shoulders,
Aint no way to say goodbye,
No way that I'd be lonely with you standing by my side,
Everything felt right but somewhere we went wrong,
Cause now you're gone
But the door is always open,
And my hearts been locked and chained,
And every now and then when I feel like talking,
I go back now my world is stopping,
On things that I can't handle,
Wish there was something I could say,
To bring us back to when we had it all,
Yeah back to yesterdayI turned my cell phone off,
Cause I can't live this way,
Waiting on your call,
Hoping something's changed,
Man it kills me to know that there aint us anymoreBut the door is always open,
And my hearts been locked and chained,
And every now and then when I feel like talking,

I go back now my world is stopping,
On things that I can't handle,
Wish there was something I could say,
To bring us back to when we had it all,
Yeah back to yesterday
