

The Weight of Love

Snow Patrol

And your engine's revving, I can hear it from the garden.
I can see it coming, I can see it come for miles.
What you're thinking right now, 'cause I think that I can guess.
If we set off now, we'll have the highway to ourselves.
And you love the little signs of life,
You love it when we lose our minds,
You love these little wars of words,
You love it when they call your name, your name.
A new empire beckons, a new kingdom in the distance,
No gods are present, just the sky, the earth, and us,
No wings, no halos, nor thunder in the footsteps,
Cause fear and anger, they are a law unto themselves.
And you love the little signs of life,
You love it when we lose our minds,
You love these little wars of words,
You love it when they call your name.
It's the weight of love in your arms,
It's the weight of love in your arms,
It's the weight of love so gentle in your arms.
[X2]
It's just like you told me, that I should learn to let it all go,
Just took 'til now, for me to get just what you meant,
My heart is thumping, I can feel it in my fingers,
No fear, no anger, we are a law unto ourselves.
It's the weight of love in your arms
It's the weight of love in your arms
It's the weight of love so gentle in your arms
X3

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnllyrics.com/>