

Bare Bones

Perseph1/Andacc

I remember what my daddy taught me
'Bout how one risky is in a cold ditch
And one more thing about good and evil
    You can't tell which is which
    Well, if the rest is lost and history
    Or maybe wasted on a fool like me
        And that these bare bones
        Would leave me something after all
        Old Hamlet's done now, dead and gone
        And there's no ghost who walks
Poor [Incomprehensible] tells you everything he knows
    With no tongue to talk
It seems the truth is hidden where the sun don't shine
    And I'm never certain if it's their's or mine
        It's just the bare bones
        They give you that much after all
They preached the gospel down in [Incomprehensible]
    They preached it in school
    It never made much sense to me
        Wonder if it was supposed to
        You go on down a millionaires road
        Watch a while, tell me what do you see
        The truth itself, nothing but a gamble
        It might or might not set you free
        I guess, my old man was hard to read
        And I don't really know what I believed
            But in these bare bones
            There's something lovely after all
