

Sunrise

Slowtide

Sunrise, the harmony lies, because I'm lying here forsaken disguised, the status applies, cause this young heart won't stop aching

Why should I get up at all to a day that holds frustration since I never got over you I can't start a new relation

So I abide the ways that never lead to the right
the further I go the more you vanish from my sight

So far, we were on a par, a career has come between us it's bizarre, the way these things are, now the lows row up quite seamless why should I conceal the fact that I followed without knowing it's true, you've obstructed my view, and I can't see where I'm going

So I abide the ways that never lead to the right
the further I go the more you vanish from my sight
