For Anyone

Kasey Anderson

Poisoned head pounding like a heavy weight fight
And I'm not feelin like myself tonight
But if that devil moon come out n hits me right I'll be anyone
And I cut a straight black path through the home of the brave, dragging dried up memories of stranger days
Just to lie down next to you in a shallow grave unmarked by anyone
Chased your voice down the rivers edge
Where they wash believers and they raise the dead
And I built you an alter and I bowed my head and cried out for anyone.
And in the shadow of a dream I guess I lost my nerve, I was as retched as it seems Believe everything you heard while I tell you all about it.
Right now I don't wanna speak a word to anyone
I still got ur name srawlled out across my back
I should a known you'd let me bleed like that I'll find a brand new deciple and when the room goes black she'll look like anyone.
I've been drowning in this city of rain and you ripped right through me like a runaway train
God damn I loved you now I just wait around for anyone
And in the emptiness of morning you, you were gone I was bolted to the floor
You've been movin all along you left me twisted up and tired, with nothin but a song I don't wanna sing for anyone.

Lyrics Submitted by Justin Templeton

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/