Change My Name

Trading Yesterday

I haven't seen the sun in seven days.
I can't remember when I saw your face,
but I still believe that you led me through the wilderness.
And you have not forgotten me through all of this.

A million miles have let me to this place,
where all I've ever loved has been erased.
Changing my song to a disenchanted lullaby,
with a name I never really felt was mine.
But I have learned that I can earn any love you've given.
So I'm finding hope and letting go,
of all that I have made.

Because the pain defining me is holding me lifeless.
So I am waiting patiently for you to change my name.

Open up to my heart surgery.
The waiting rooms are my reality,
where I still believe there's a purpose to this pain inside.
And you are not, not leaving me here tonight.
But formless hope will never know while the storm is raging.
So I will strive to stay alive in these waves.

Because the pain defining me is holding me lifeless.
So I am waiting patiently for you.
Because the pain defining me is holding me lifeless.
So I am waiting patiently for you.
And I am waiting for you to change my name,
for you to change my name.
