Someone Special

Poets of the Fall

I wake up to the sound of rain upon my sill Pick up the pieces of my yesterday old thrill Can I deliver this used up shiver To how I pronounce my life

And I leave it up to faith to go by its own willBack row to the left, a little to the side

Slightly out of the place

Look beyond the light, where you'd least expect

There's someone specialA foggy morning greets me quietly today

I smell a fragrance in the wind blowing my way

And ever further I run to find her

I yearn to define my life

Placing my faith in chance to meet me in half wayBack row to the left, a little to the side

Slightly out of the place

Look beyond the light, where you'd least expect

There's someone specialAnd she's here to write her name

On my skin with kisses

In the rain, hold my head and ease my pain
In a world that's gone insaneBack row to the left, a little to the side
Slightly out of the place
Look beyond the light, where you'd least expect

There's someone special
